Floating Catering Building

Waterstudio designed the Floating Catering Building for a company that takes care of the catering for the canal boats in Amsterdam. The building is situated in the single canal in Amsterdam. The roof, end walls and ground level form a continuous line framing the working area and office and accentuating the entrance and elevator by bending down in the middle. The kitchens are situated partly underneath the water level. The elevator brings the food to the ground floor level. By using materials like aluminum, glass and metal shutters the building has been given an industrial look. The big glass façades show the lime green interior that brings the color into the building. At night this gives a nice glow over the water.
